Many Firms
Still Exclude Jews

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
CAMBRIDGE—Mark Ethridge, a member of President Roosevelt's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, asserted this week that many of the Nation's largest and most vital war industries are discriminating against Jews and Negroes by refusing to employ them, even when they are highly skilled workers.

"We know of one case," Mr. Ethridge said, "where several factories prevailed upon a technical school to train a large group of boys with the purpose of hiring them as skilled workers as soon as they graduated. In the group were nine Jews and one Negro. The Negro led the entire class, graduating with an average of 98 per cent. All nine of the men were among the first fifteen in the class. When they graduated however, not one of them was employed by the factories which promoted the school. The Negro was so brilliant that he now is an instructor, turning out men for factories which would not employ him."

IN THE SERVICE NOW

With Indiana's Jewish Boys at War

So much interest has been shown in the doings of Indiana's Jewish boys in the service that The Post has decided to run a weekly column under the above heading. Parents and friends, not only in Indianapolis but throughout Indiana are invited to send in contributions, as are the boys in the service themselves. The Post is sent free to any member of the United States forces anywhere provided their parents are subscribers.

BERNARD KASEFF GREET'S FRIENDS BACK HOME

Have been notified of your kind gesture to all soldiers in the armed forces of the U. S. Would deeply appreciate receiving your weekly paper.

Prior to entering the service, was an ardent reader of your paper. No doubt it would contain many interesting features which I have so long desired to hear from home. Would you kindly convey my greetings and regards to all my friends back home.

Thanking you,
SGT. BERNARD H. KASEFF,
Anti-Tank Co., 358th Infantry
Camp Barkeley, Texas.

CITY SOLDIER FINDS ZIONISTS, HEBREW CONVERSATIONALISTS

To the editor:

It is only fitting to compliment you, again, on the service you are rendering the Indiana Jewish men in the armed forces, as well as to the home community. The Post has not only grown in size, but has also matured into an animated and versatile organ of expression and information.

Incidentally, it may be just the product of a "Yankee" misconception, but I was almost astonished, at first, to find several avid Zionists among deep Southern Jewry. At intervals, it has also been my privilege to meet students of Hebrew from the metropolitan areas in the East, and recent arrivals from Central Europe. Most of the latter use the brilliant and precise Palestinian or Sephardic dialect. It is stimulating to have the opportunity to reminisce, occasionally, in terms of a language I once knew so well.

Yours for a democratic victory,

American Jewish Congress Demands Place at Peace Table; Approves $1,000,000 Budget

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
CHICAGO—A demand that the United Nations recognize "the international status of the Jewish people" and give them full opportunity to participate in any peace conferences in all matters affecting their interests was made last week by the American Jewish Congress at the final session of its war emergency conference at the Hotel Sherman.

The congress approved a budget of $1,000,000, half of it to be used for an emergency fund to defend the rights of Jews and to promote post-war reconstruction. The remaining $500,000 is for the normal program of the congress.

Resolutions directing the Governing Council of the congress to take steps to secure the creation of a united Jewish delegation to the post-war peace conference and "to work in the direction of democratic reconstruction of Jewish life in America," were also adopted by the conference.

Another resolution pledged the solidarity of American Jews with "the despoiled and homeless among the Jewish people" throughout the world. This statement condemned "the development of movements within Jewish life to isolate American Jews from the implications of Jewish unity."

Other resolutions deplore the existing conflict among Jewish agencies operating in the field of civic defense and recommend that efforts be made to achieve unity. They provide for the organization, in collaboration with other Jewish agencies, of a public relations committee for the purpose of keeping the general public informed regarding the danger which this country may face as a result of anti-Semitic propaganda and other anti-American activities. The organization of community councils in communities where such do not exist and the "coordination and democratization" of those already in existence is also recommended in the resolutions.

Dr. Wise was reelected president of the congress.

Of this sum, $150,000 is to be given by the Central Conference of American Rabbis from its own Pension Fund, and the rest by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations from the Schiff Fund and from the Joseph Schonthal Fund.

Axis Baby

IN OUR Jewish Hospital an Axis baby was born the other week. All over our town people chuckled at the mordant irony of the matter of an official Axis baby being born in the hands of Jews.

It so happened that in one of our hotels some 500 Axis—German and Japanese—diplomatic agents from Central and South America were temporarily interned pending arrival of ships to take them home, and one of the Axis wives—a Japanese—came there to the moment of giving birth.

And when such a crisis occurs in human affairs, what is the first thing done? The first thing, of course, is to summon a doctor. The Axis diplomatic set took hurried steps in that direction . . . "Send a doctor quick, please. One of our ladies. . ."

A doctor was close at hand: The hotel's own physician, in fact, and in no time he, Dr. John Falk, was upstairs in Axis territory without any passport, except the common credentials of humanity which were generally respected until the Axis changed the rules.

The doctor ministered to the Axis lady, doing everything that is done in such cases before it is time to go to the hospital. It is related that in the course of his visits to the Axis reservation he fell in with a German diplomat who, noticing something German in the doctor's accent, asked him as landsman to landsman, "Ah, doctor, and how do you happen to be here?"

"Oh," the physician replied, "I had a disagreement with Hitler."

The embarrassed German did not pursue the matter any further. In the German diplomacy, there seems to be no protocol to tell a German diplomat just what to say or do in the mortifying moment when he meets a German Jew come to serve an Axis lady in distress.

Yes, Dr. Falk was indeed a Jew from Germany, a young man who had come to America to finish his medical course.

His attendance on Mme. Butterfly—if that was her name—was brief. Dr. Falk had another date: The same evening he was leaving to join the U. S. Army as a medical officer. Deeply grateful to the United States, he had taken up the service of his adopted country as soon as he could.

He sent his patient to the Jewish Hospital. The news of the Axis baby about to be born among them was cause of congratulatory felicitations throughout the Axis reservation in the hotel's five upper stories. The pleasurable thought of one more individual being victoriously added to the Axis population of the world might have been vitiated by dismay had it been known that the Axis child was to come into the world by the generosity and loving-kindness of Jews in their Jewish Hospital.

I know very little, if anything, about the mechanical process by which an infant is brought into the world. My knowledge of this is chiefly poetic: The gates of life are thrown open to the newcomer. The masked people in white stood about . . . the obstetrician, the anaesthetist, the interne, the two nurses. It was a solemn moment in any case when a new life enters the world, but this meant something more to the Jewish attendants at the Axis' mothers' side.

This looked like the exquisitely perfect fulfillment of ideals they had received in their childhood. "The stranger that sojourneth with you shall be unto you as the home-born among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself: For ye were sojourners in the land of Egypt." Not that they remembered this commandment by word. They probably couldn't have told where in the Old Testament it was to be found, but it was deep in their social idealism. They were privileged to bring to life the stranger from among the enemies of Jews.

Nor do I know exactly what occurs at the moment an infant enters into the light of day, except that I hear it said that the newborn gives out a shout; though why he should come shouting into this sorry world I can't understand. The Axis child came shouting into the welcoming hands of Jews—Dr. Edward Friedman, obstetrician. Dr. Jack Solway, interne, Miss Doris Haas, nurse. (The anaesthetist, Dr. (Continued on page 8)

OUR CHILDREN SAID IT

Mrs. Marvin Volk, of Tucson, Arizona, formerly of Louisville, Ky., was admonishing her small three-year-old son, Stanley, to wash his face. Little Stanley turned and said:

"Why do I always have to wash my face?"

"Because you get it dirty," answered Mrs. Volk.

"Well, why can't I powder over the dirt like you do, Momma?" queried Stanley. Contributed by William I. Dumes, Tucson, Arizona.

INDIANA'S JEWISH MAN OF THE YEAR

The Washington Merry-Go-Round, syndicated column of Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, had this to say about the man chosen as the Post's Jewish Man of the Year for 1941:

"Here is the most unique job of selling war bonds and stamps that we have run across to date."

"The Wolf & Dessauer department store of Fort Wayne, Ind., recently celebrated its 46th anniversary. And instead of staging the traditional anniversary sale, its entire celebration was devoted to the sale of bonds and stamps.

"Every line of newspaper advertising, usually devoted to dry goods, was an appeal to buy bonds. Every salesman and saleswoman concentrated on the drive. Each floor of the store vied to sell the most. Departmental buyers and employees planned all the advertising and all the direct mail selling.

"In the end, G. Irving Latz, a Hoosier Marshall Field, together with his employees, managed to sell $300,000 in stamps and bonds during that one week."

The editor's chair,

Remember my college roommate Robert L. Kushner? You may recall that he was at Hickam Field, Honolulu on Dec. 7, and was decorated for bravery in action after he joined what doctors were available (he is a dentist) and worked for over thirty-six hours straight under fire, bringing in wounded and patching them up. He later was promoted to captain, and the reason I'm mentioning him now is that in opening the Jewish Telegraphic Agency news report one day last week, telling of Senator Scott Lucas' address at the Jewish War Veterans' Memorial exercises in New York, I came across the following sentence:

"Those who engage in scurrilous attacks are fifth columnists intent on causing disruption and confusion. To them and their like I say the record belies your falsehoods. The names of Captain Robert Kushner, of Corporal Theodore J. Lewis, of Ensign Stanley Caplan, of Private Joseph Guttmann, of Dr. Sidney L. Binder, and numerous others stand out as incontrovertible evidence of the fact that men of Jewish faith are as valiant as their Christian brothers."

Bob's name led all the rest. At school where Bob was a leading athlete, all the other boys in the house had little faith in him. They thought he'd never get over being a playboy (he was big and handsome), but I defended him. Later when he studied dentistry, and got down to business, he was near the top of his class, and then in Atlanta, where he opened his offices, and settled down, (I met my wife at his home), he was an amazing success, although he practiced only about five years before being called to the army about a year and a half ago. He's now somewhere in the South Seas, and don't think I'm not proud of him.

The Akron Convention and the War Effort

IF AS THE publicity declares, the convention of District Grand Lodge No. 2 of B'nai B'rith in Akron, O., this weekend, will concern itself mainly with the Order's contribution to the Defense effort, then at last some method is finally about to be devised to bring order out of the confusion in which every individual lodge, with nothing but the exhortations of national officers to guide it, finds itself.

Unquestionably the manpower of every B'nai B'rith lodge all over, not alone in District No. 2, wants to do all in its ability to aid the nation. What is lacking only is a blueprint of how to proceed.

After a half year of unguided activity, The Post believes that the District Grand Lodge, and later the Supreme Lodge, should lay down a series of rules for the organization of the lodges along definite and specified lines, a sort of mobilization in a military sort of way.

Somewhere The Post has heard it suggested that every lodge divide itself along military lines with majors and captains and lieutenants, to the point where each ten members in the lodge is under the direct supervision of some military-like division. In this way, the head of the lodge's military effort, if a certain piece of work has to be done, will relay the order to his officer, who in turn will contact the man directly beneath them, and they in turn will advise the membership at large.

Under this method, a lodge will be mobilized for every emergency.

Then too, the Supreme lodge should lay out a series of elementary goals, which every lodge should strive for. In this category, would be such minimum essentials as the holding of Red Cross First Aid Classes, giving blood to the Blood Bank, the buying of bonds and so forth.

Then on top of this the Supreme lodge should outline a group of activities in which the lodge should make every effort to interest themselves, but in which they may use their discretion depending upon local situations. In this field would be volunteering for air raid wardens, enlisting as auxiliary police, and so forth.

A third classification might center on morale work among the local boys in the armed forces, and or Jewish boys in the armed forces in neighboring camps. In this connection, a fine example was set by the Lexington, Ky., lodge. This group invited all the Jewish boys at Fort Knox, some fifty miles away to a weekend in the Bluegrass city as guests of the community there. Saturday night they dined and danced, with the Jewish belles of that famed section of Kentucky as their hostesses, and the next day in large buses they toured the sights of the Bluegrass region with the female companions to add interest to the purebred Kentucky horses, and the enamelled greens of Kentucky's finest plantations.

Yes, what is needed is some sort of guidance on a national scale. Individual lodges may do fine pieces of work, but this overlooks the many lodges in which the leadership, desirous as it is of doing some good, is not capable of directing the lodge into the proper channels.

If, The Post says again, the convention in Akron wants to do the job its publicity says it wants to do, then it really can make a splendid contribution to that end, if it will bring order out of the present confusion.

Pension Plan Should Be Extended

THE PENSION PLAN under which reform rabbis will now be assured an income after their retirement is a major achievement in American Jewish community life, and it should point a way for the provision of the same security for other Jewish social service workers.

As it is now, Jewish school teachers, social workers, and center workers, although highly educated and trained over many years, work at salaries far below what their abilities would bring them either in the business world or in the non-Jewish field. Devoted to their work they are called upon for large contributions to every drive, and in addition their tenure in office usually depends on the annual community fund-raising effort, and is never so secure as not to face the possibility of a cut from an unsympathetic budget committee.

In Louisville, which is an example of bad planning, the Hebrew School teachers far from asking for a pension after they have devoted their lives to bringing up the community's children in the ways of Judaism, have to wait for months for their salaries, meagre as they are.

There has been some pension talk among the national organizations of these workers in the Jewish field, but so far nothing concrete has been evolved. When the pension plan finally is adopted all over, it will provide for the stabilization of a part of the Jewish community which insures the future and continuity of Jewish life in America.

AL SEGAL

W. S. Kautz and the supervising nurse, Mrs. Brock, were non-Jews.)

Later another Friedman—Dr. Lee Friedman—came into the case as pediatrician to guide the infant in the first days of its course in a horribly difficult world.

Mother and child did very well, and at the end of two weeks Mme. Butterfly and her husband were eloquently grateful. "It was all so fine," said Mr. Butterfly who spoke the better English.

The Jewish Hospital people were grateful too: Their hands had been privileged to do this good in return for all evil. In Axis countries Jewish babies were being ushered out of life by lingering exit of death by starvation. The bodies of Jewish mothers were in the immense holocaust of Jews the Nazis had piled up marching into Russia.

The bodies of Jewish babies in Poland were being carted away by the hundreds to overcrowded cemeteries while grateful Nazis counted each death a victory unto the day when there would be no more Jews. Infants that survived would live for the doom of a rickety, stunted life.

The Japanese had taken up the manners of Nazis though they scarcely knew Jews. They knew Jews only as their prisoners in places they had occupied—Shanghai, Hong Kong, Manila, Thailand, Burma, Singapore. They were all refugees who had fled from Hitler only to find themselves later entrapped by his Japanese imitators. Jews are people for Japanese concentration camps, humiliation and starvation.

The Jewish Hospital people could exult; they were like people high on a hill in the bright light of civilization, above an immense darkness. They had given a full devotion to the Axis child. I hope, though, that the taste of the divine sweetness of being kind was seasoned for them by the spice of sardonic satisfaction. It was the perfection of poetic justice at which the gods like to laugh.
